

WINE UNDER $20

Lambrusco, Thankfully

By HOWARD G. GOLDBERG

Published: November 11, 2007

Lambrusco, a fizzy Emilia-Romagna red that resembles sweet soda pop, has long been déclassé. Now some producers have gone upscale.

A rare white lambrusco and a stylish rosé from Lini have much in common.

Both are dry, lightly sparkling and nonvintage; both contain a low 11 percent alcohol; and both are ideal for Thanksgiving.

The white is $15 and the raspberry-like rosé $17 at Vino, 121 East 27th Street (Park Avenue South).